

Abstract

The present invention concerns a fermentation process for converting a monohydric secondary alcohol having 5 or more carbon atoms into the corresponding ketone, suitable microorganisms for that purpose.